Centred in the hoist is a large gold Commonwealth Star on a circular blue field. Radiating outwards from this medallion are sixteen red-white-and-blue stripes, representative of all of the states and territories of Australia. Three of the stripes project into the fly, an utterly unique arrangement that will make this flag instantly recognisable at any distance and in any wind. The stars of the Southern Cross have been centred within 'halos' to better emphasise them against the stripes, and to effectively enlarge them for easier recognition. A 'stripes through the fly' design is also depicted above for all of the other Oz flags and ensigns.
